II、閱讀測驗——請詳讀下列二段短文並回答所附問題（單選）。40%

(A) At the same time the forces of American commercialism are hugely dedicated to making us deliberately unhappy. Advertising is one of our major industries, and advertising exists not to satisfy desires but to create them--and to create them faster than any man's budget can satisfy them. For that matter, our whole economy is based on a dedicated insatiability. We are taught that to possess is to be happy, and then we are made to want. We are even told it is our duty to want. It was only a few years ago, to cite a single example, that car dealers across the country were flying banners that read "You Auto Buy Now." They were calling upon Americans, as an act approaching patriotism, to buy at once with money they did not have, automobiles they did not really need, and which they would be required to grow tired of by the time the next year's models were released.

- 1) Which one of the following is not this author's view on commercialism? a) It creates our desire. b) It makes use of patriotism c) It asks us to buy more than we need. d) It means to satisfy our need.
- 2) The words "dedicated insatiability" mean that people are (a) never satisfied (b) always happy (c) forever bored (d) constantly sad.
- 3) Which of the following is not a problem an American consumer would have, if he or she (s/he) bought a car? (a) S/he would spend more money than s/he had. (b) S/he would dislike the car very soon. (c) S/he might be buying a wrong car. (d) S/he might be buying more than s/he needed.
- 4) This passage basically (a) criticizes human greed (b) condemns consumerism (c) analyzes the structure of economy (d) complains auto dealers.

(B) Golf, like baseball, is a pastoral sport--with a high degree of tensions and drama but relatively little action. It is a game in which players are constantly in awe of the magic flight of the golf ball. To hit any kind of ball 100 or 200 or more yards with accuracy or to hit a small target from 150 yards is an amazing feat to be appreciated only by those who have at least tried the game. Golf is very likely the most difficult game to master, yet one in which the average player occasionally hits a shot as good as the best of any professional. It is this dream of magic results that keeps the golfer on course.

- 1) Golf is a "pastoral sport" means it is (a) exciting (b) leisure (c) long (d) playful.
- 2) What's the charm of golf? (a) You can hit a ball far. (b) Everyone can play. (c) You can watch the magic flight of the ball. (d) Anyone will once in a while hit a good shot like a pro.
- 3) The words "on course" mean that the golfer will (a) keep playing (b) attend courses (c) practice more eagerly (d) invite friends to come.
- 4) The passage basically (a) analyzes the fun of golf (b) indicates the difficulty of playing golf well (c) introduces some ways of how professionals play (d) summarizes the rules of golf.
